

STAR continues to add language combinations to its solutions portfolio

STAR Servicios Lingüísticos, the Spanish branch of the international STAR Group, continues to offer translation, transcreation, subtitling, interpretation, software localisation and DTP services in a growing number of languages.

While STAR provided services in 104 language combinations in 2016, just one year later this number had grown to 135!

The most important combinations are English (British or American) - followed by German and French – into different variants of Spanish, both peninsular Spanish and variants of Central and South America, such as Mexican, Colombian or Chilean Spanish. With the increasing internationalisation of Spanish companies, their linguistic needs are also growing, a shift that has been noted here at STAR Servicios Lingüísticos: from Spanish, translations were made into 32 languages. The Catalan company also works for clients from the UK, France, Germany and other EU countries, as well as from the US. From English, we translated into a total of 45 languages, from French into 14 and from German into 12 languages.

"Being able to offer this large number of language combinations with guaranteed quality would be very difficult without the support of the STAR Group's international network," says Ester García, Operations and Quality Manager at the Barcelona-based company. "51 offices in 30 countries, with computer experts, project managers and expert linguists all working with the same assisted translation technology, employing the best practices set out in the quality standards of the sector, means that our clients are able to place their trust in us. We also work with hundreds of professionals around the world and are continually adding expert linguists to our database."
